

Fig. 11: Both the wooden and the resin version of the Cihongo mask type bear an impressive fanlike crown made of feathers of the great blue turaco or plantain-eater (Corythaeola cristata).

Fig. 12: Although it is sometimes carved in wood, the headpiece of Cihongo is more often made of a twig frame covered with colorfully painted fabric.