

Studia Series of the Anthropos Institute

In 1909, shortly after he had founded the Anthropos journal, Wilhelm Schmidt started a monograph series in ethnology, followed in 1914 by one in linguistics. By 1950 a total of 31 books had been published. When Fritz Bornemann became editor in 1949 he combined these two series in a third new set called "Studia Instituti Anthropos," the first volume of which appeared in 1950. By 1992, 46 volumes had appeared in this series.

Ethnological research has changed dramatically in recent years. The unremitting spread of Western industrial civilization has led to a devaluation of regional and local cultures. As a result, the Anthropos Institute has taken on the task of promoting the preservation of surviving cultures and languages, in order to accentuate the diversity of creation and to recognize the basic right of mankind to cultural self-determination.

The Studia series would like to foster and contribute to the investigation and preservation of cultures. Works published in this series are monographs of ethnological and religious-ethnological character, be they dissertations or other independent results of research. Manuscripts are welcomed. They will be read and, if appropriate, accepted for publication.
