

Pygmy Personality

By JOHN M. GARVAN †

Contents:

1. Some Good Points of Pygmy Personality
 - a) Pygmy Politeness
 - b) "The Still Small Voice Within"
 - c) Sexual Decorum
 - d) The Pygmy's Kindliness
 - e) Pygmy Hospitality
 - f) The Pygmy's Peaceful and Pacific Disposition
 - g) The Sunshine of a Pygmy's Life
 - h) The Pygmy's Love of Home and Forest Homeland
2. More Good Points of Pygmy Personality
 - a) Kindness towards Kith and Kin
 - b) Feelings for the Feeble and the Frail among Their Fellows
 - c) Doing the Honors to Their Visitors
 - d) General Contentment and Peace
 - e) Spirit of Sportiveness and Humor
 - f) Spirit of Candour and Truthfulness
 - g) Their Fundamental Honesty
 - h) Love of Liberty and Free Life
 - i) Love of Forest Freedom
 - j) Friendliness and Gratitude
 - k) Simplicity and Humbleness
3. The Pygmy's Bad Points and Little Peccadilloes
 - a) His Timidity
 - b) His Free and Easy Life
 - c) Lack of Desire for Civilization
 - d) Tendency to Imitate
 - e) Little Frailties of Human Intercourse

Editor's Note: We are publishing in this article the first three chapters of GARVAN's great Negrito manuscript. They belong to those parts of the manuscript which, in their style, are among the best elaborated. As to their contents, they give the description of the Negrito, as GARVAN saw him on account of his investigation of individual groups, which he carried out for a number of years among different groups of the north and the south of the Philippines. That GARVAN himself particularly appreciated this description, is shown by the fact that he prepared parts of it for publication in the "Philippine Magazine" (August, September, November 1934). — The entire manuscript of about 1,000 pages has been published as Vol. 19 in the "Micro-Bibliotheca Anthropos" (MBA). In order to make uniform quotation possible, the pagination of the MBA-publication is inserted within the text of this article. — Cf. FRITZ BORNEMANN, JOHN M. GARVAN'S Materialien über die Negrito der Philippinen und P. W. SCHMIDT'S Notizen dazu. Infra, pp. 899-930.